 Entry Into Army

69. Some quarrels developed between DURCANSKY, the Slovak Foreign Minister and Bernhard, the German Ambassador and a fanatical Nazi. DURCANSKY said that Slovakia was now out of the war, since they were only fighting Poland, so asked various foreign powers, including the Allies to send Ambassadors to the Slovak Government. DURCANSKY was also very much opposed to the Nazification of Slovaks. F.(meaning Fiala) was asked for a report on DURCANSKY's policy. He wrote that the two men would never agree because one was a Slovak Minister, whereas the other was the envoy of the Nazi Party and not even of the State).
